He is fluent in Portuguese and English.

Experience

Gonçalo has worked in various regulated sectors, including health, water and sanitation, energy, transport, infrastructure (e.g. airports) and gambling.

He advises public and private clients on various areas of public law, with particular expertise in constitutional law and administrative law, especially in public procurement matters, including the monitoring of public procurement procedures and the execution of complex administrative contracts, such as concession contracts and public-private partnerships.

Gonçalo also has extensive experience in litigation, representing public and private entities before administrative courts and arbitration tribunals, particularly in pre-contractual litigation and economic and financial rebalancing of concession contracts and public-private partnerships.

He has also advised on public law matters in foreign legal systems, such as Angola and Mozambique, particularly in the context of international arbitration.

Academic and Publishing Collaborations

He is the author of several publications in his areas of expertise, such as:
